this is the first etymological dictionary of proto celtic to be published after a hundred years synthesizing the work of several generations of celtic scholars it contains a reconstructed lexicon of proto celtic with ca 1500 entries the principal lemmata are alphabetically arranged words reconstructed for proto celtic each lemma contains the reflexes of the proto celtic words in the individual celtic languages the proto indo european pie roots from which they developed as well as the cognate forms from other indo european languages the focus is on the development of forms from pie to proto celtic but histories of individual words are explained in detail and each lemma is accompanied by an extensive bibliography the introduction contains an overview of the phonological developments from pie to proto celtic and the volume includes an appendix treating the probable loanwords from unknown non ie substrates in proto celtic the aeolic dialects of ancient greek lesbian thessalian and boeotian are characterised by a small bundle of commonly shared innovations yet at the same time they exhibit remarkable linguistic diversity while traditionally classified together in modern scholarship since the nineteenth century in recent decades doubt has been cast on whether they form a coherent dialectal subgroup of ancient greek in this monograph matthew scarborough outlines the history of problem of aeolic classification from antiquity to the present day collects and analyses the primary evidence for the linguistic innovations that unite and divide the group and contributes an innovative new statistical methodology for evaluating highly contested genetic subgroupings in dialectology ultimately arguing in support of the traditional classification this book challenges the steppe origin theory of indo aryans arguing their homeland was in nw iran using linguistic genetic and archaeological data it traces migrations from iran to central asia india and beyond during the 3rd millennium bc shaping indo aryan dialects the dispersal of the indo european language family from the third millennium bce is thought to have dramatically altered europe s linguistic landscape many of the preexisting languages are assumed to have been lost as indo european languages including greek latin celtic germanic baltic slavic and armenian dominate in much of western eurasia from historical times to elucidate the linguistic encounters resulting from the indo europeanization process this volume evaluates the lexical evidence for prehistoric language contact in multiple indo european subgroups at the same time taking a critical stance to approaches that have been applied to this problem in the past this volume presents 21 peer reviewed studies on the bronze age in ireland britain and beyond covering themes like technology trade and identity it offers fresh insights into metalworking burial practices and landscape use making it a key reference for atlantic bronze age research the handbook of language contact offers systematic coverage of the major issues in this field ranging from the value of contact explanations in linguistics to the impact of immigration to dialectology combining new research from a team of globally renowned scholars with case studies of numerous languages an authoritative reference work exploring the major issues in the field of language contact the study of how language changes when speakers of distinct speech varieties interact brings together 40 specially commissioned essays by an international team of scholars examines language contact in societies which have significant immigration populations and includes a fascinating cross section of case studies drawing on languages across the world accessibly structured into sections exploring the place of contact studies within linguistics as a whole the value of contact studies for research into language change and language contact in the context of work on language and society explores a broad range of topics making it an excellent resource for both faculty and students across a variety of fields within linguistics this volume offers a discussion of the phonological and morphological development of old irish and its indo european origins the emphasis is on the relative chronology of sound changes and on the development of the verbal system special attention is devoted to the origin of absolute and relative verb forms to the rise of the mutations to the role of thematic and athematic inflexion types in the formation of present classes preterits subjunctives and futures and to the development of deponents and passive forms other topics include infixes and suffixed pronouns palatalization of consonants and labialization of vowels and the role of continental celtic in the reconstruction of proto celtic the final chapter provides a detailed analysis of the latin and other italic data which are essential to a reconstruction of proto italo celtic the appendix contains a full reconstruction of the old irish verbal paradigms which renders the subject more easily accessible to a wider audience the book is of interest to celticists latinists indo europeanists and other historical linguists in the reflexes of the proto indo european laryngeals in celtic nicholas zair for the first time collects and assesses all the words from the celtic languages which contained a laryngeal and identifies the regular results of the laryngeals in each phonetic environment this allows him to formulate previously unrecognised sound changes affecting proto celtic and assess the competing explanations for other developments this work has far reaching consequences for the understanding of the historical phonology and morphology of the celtic languages and for etymological work involving the celtic language along with implications for indo european sound laws and the indo european syllable a major conclusion is that the laryngeals cannot be used to argue for an italo celtic language family
